

A player may be eliminated while out of bounds

Any player hit with a ball thrown from the opposing team (shoulders and below) will be out (balls that hit the ground first are dead balls). The player must exit the playing field.

A player is eliminated if while throwing a ball at an opposing player, it is caught in the air. The throwing player must exit the playing field.

Eliminated players must stay in order of elimination along the sideline on their team's side. If a thrown ball strikes a ball in a player's possession, and that ball is dropped, the player will be eliminated. A ball may be used to block a thrown ball, but possession must be maintained.

If a ball is caught, the first player who was eliminated from the team of the person who caught the ball will re-enter the game.

If a thrown ball deflects off a ball in a player's possession, the ball is dead.

A player may only save him/herself. If a ball hits Player X, only player X may catch the ball that hit them to avoid being out. If anyone else from their team catches it for them, player X is out. If player X catches the ball, the person who threw the ball will be eliminated.

During the match, when there are 4 players or fewer remaining on the court, the referee shall call OPEN COURT and players may advance anywhere on the court. Players must